Foreclosure is every homeowner's biggest dread. When you can no longer make payments to your mortgage lender, they'll try to earn back lost payments by reclaiming ownership and selling the home.

A foreclosure can severely damage your credit score, future homebuying ability, and your ego. It's important to know what to do if you can no longer pay your monthly mortgage to avoid foreclosure.

PREVENTING FORECLOSURE EARLY

The surest way to prevent foreclosure is to make your monthly payments on your mortgage. If you fear you might be unable to make these payments at some point, the next best step is to set up a plan beforehand.

FIX YOUR FINANCES

Having a budget can give you more power over where your money goes each month. Your mortgage allows you to pay off your home, which is a top priority.

HAVE A BACKUP PLAN

If you need to, you can rent out a room, liquidate assets, get a side job, or dip into your savings for extra money as a temporary solution.

KNOW YOUR MORTGAGE RELIEF OPTIONS

Whether it's a short sale, refinancing your home, filing for bankruptcy, or forbearance, knowing the different options prepares you for extreme situations.

MORTGAGE RELIEF

There are some relief options for people facing hardship and at risk of going into foreclosure. Some options include:

- Foreclosure relief options (search by state)
- Get a HUD housing counselor (U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development)
- Sell your assets (car, electronics, jewelry) to make up for mortgage payments
- Pandemic-related homeowner relief funds
