

My motto is "To give real service, you must add something which cannot be measured with money, and that is sincerity and integrity." I believe that selling real estate is not about transactions and selling, it is about service and building relationships. Coming from a 15 yr background in the restaurant industry here in Arizona, real estate was an easy transition for me. My business model is about building relationships and guiding people through one of, if not the most important experience of their lives. My mission is to make the process feel less like a process and more like an adventure to be remembered. My strategy is minimizing the amount of stress and time while maximizing my client's financial gains and helping them achieve their ultimate goals in buying and selling a home.

As a transplant from South Dakota in 2002, I do really enjoy helping those relocating to AZ. I have lived in just about every part of the valley over the last almost 2 decades and have a lot of information to offer about most cities in and outside the Phoenix metro area. My clients tell me I am an excellent tour guide!
