Have a karaoke night. Buy or borrow a karaoke microphone and spend the night singing along with your favorite songs.

Make a time capsule. Fill a box with mementos from your relationship and bury it in your backyard. You'll have so much fun digging it up on another date night in the future!

Have a pajama party. Throw on your favorite flannels as soon as you get home from work. When's the last time you cooked dinner in footie pajamas?

Have a DIY date. A little DIY project can be really fun. Repaint that dresser you've been wanting to refinish or hang those shelves that have been languishing on the floor forever. Your future selves will thank you.

Make fancy cocktails. Who needs to go to a crowded restaurant? Save time and money by learning how to mix your favorite cocktails at home. You can still get all dressed up to make the evening feel extra special.

Have breakfast for dinner. Let's be real, pancakes taste good at any time of day. Mix things up by having your favorite breakfast foods for dinner, or try making Ree's delicious breakfast-for-dinner sandwiches!

Go "camping" in your backyard. Make a bonfire, grab some cozy camping blankets, and roast s'mores in the comfort of your own backyard. Instead of telling ghost stories, revisit your favorite memories from your relationship or share funny family memories.

Hold an at-home wine tasting. Splurge on a few really nice bottles of wine and serve wine flights in your living room or kitchen. You can even order at-home wine tasting kits or do a virtual tasting online to learn more about the varieties you're sampling.

Plan a scavenger hunt. Create clues about your love and or family story and take your loved ones on a fun scavenger hunt around your home. The final clue could lead to a cute couple gift to enjoy together or a family set of Valentine PJs.

Have a dance party. Make a playlist of your favorite songs and dance the night away in your kitchen, living room, or backyard. You'll be surprised how the music can whisk you away to another time or place.

Cozy Fire & Netflix Classic Movie. Light a cozy fire in your living room. If you don't have a fireplace, you can create similar magic by lighting a bunch of candles around the room grab some cozy blankets, and watch a Netflix classic.

Exchange love letters. Do this with your better half or the entire family, each write letters to each other about what you love the most about them and exchange at dinner.

Paint and Sip. Get in touch with your artistic side by having an at-home paint and sip night with your favorite wine. This is a great way to break up your routine, reconnect, and get some new décor in the process!

Learn your love languages. Take the official quiz and find out each other's love languages, or the way you receive and express love in a relationship. This simple act can help ensure that you both feel loved and appreciated. Sounds like a pretty worthwhile way to spend an evening!

Play a good old-fashioned game. Shake up your routine by playing a classic board game like Jenga, chess, Scrabble, or even cards.

Take a virtual tour around the world with Youtube. Enjoy a night of culture and education by visiting places from around the world from the comfort of your own living room. These could be places you would like to one day visit or places you are just interested to learn more about.

Hold a bakeoff. If The Great British Baking Show is your favorite show, hold your own baking competition and see who comes out on top. When you're done, you'll have some (hopefully) delicious desserts to devour together!

Spend the night looking at the stars. There are few things more romantic (or affordable!) than stargazing. Snuggle up together under a blanket and look for shooting stars, try to spot constellations, or just enjoy the night sky.

Build a fort. Get in touch with your inner child by building a fort out of pillows and blankets in your living room. Add some string lights and you'll have the perfect comfy spot for watching a movie or just relaxing and chatting.

Plan an unplugged evening. Say goodbye to your screens for the night and spend some quality time together instead!
